Ballot Measure 1 raises oil taxes by 150% to 300%

The oil and gas industry supports over one-quarter of Alaska’s workforce and has been Alaska’s largest taxpayer over the last 40 years. Since 1977, over 80% of Alaska’s unrestricted revenue has come from oil and gas in the form of production taxes, royalties, property tax, and corporate income tax. Currently, the oil industry still provides the largest source of revenue from the private sector for public services and infrastructure improvements, supports the Permanent Fund, and supports 1/4 of all jobs (77,000) in Alaska.

The state receives four main revenue streams from the oil and gas industry: royalty, production tax, corporate income tax, and property tax. The industry also pays other fees such as the conservation fund and others. Ballot Measure 1 would increase the production tax. At current prices ($40/barrel) the increase would be about $265 million more in production tax. At $60/barrel the increase would be about $800 million.

This is a critical time for the industry. The voices of its employees must be heard. The most credible source of information regarding a ballot measure that would impact the industry, are those who work in it. Employees can speak with conviction, expertise, and first-hand knowledge about the catastrophic impacts of Ballot Measure 1. Tell your friends, family, neighbors, everyone, to vote no on Ballot Measure 1.

The 2020 AGC Annual Conference Goes Virtual—Mark your calendar to Join us November 11-13.

After careful consideration, and meetings with your AGC Executive Board members, the Conference Committee and the AGC staff, I have the difficult duty of announcing that the in-person AGC Annual Conference scheduled for November 11-14, 2020 at the Hotel Captain Cook has been cancelled. This was not an easy decision, but with the current mandates in effect, and ultimately the public health and safety of our attendees, vendors, speakers, staff and volunteers led all parties to conclude that cancelling the face-to-face meeting was the safe and responsible action.

Member participation and sponsorship of AGC’s first virtual conference will be critical components to the development and success of this event. More details will be released in the weeks to follow as we prioritize and plan various aspects of the conference.

Now more than ever, the construction industry must come together and focus on the future, while remaining an essential industry and keeping our jobsites and workforce safe. Keeping your projects moving forward and not jeopardizing opportunity for the construction industry in Alaska is our number one priority.

Thank you for your understanding, and please exercise care and caution in the days ahead to take the best of care for your families, friends, colleagues, and community.  ~~ Alicia Siira, AGC of Alaska Executive Director

2021 Legislative Priorities!

It is that time of year again where we are asking for your feedback on AGC’s legislative priorities for 2021! As you may recall from last year, we implemented a new process where we reached out to each member and sought your input and feedback on what our 2020 legislative priorities should be. We are going to do that same process this year! We seek each member’s input because, in order to best represent the construction industry, we need to hear from the entire industry. So please, take some time to review our 2020 Legislative Priorities and fill out the 2021 Priority Submittal form which will be sent to you in early September.

We Kept America Building

During the darkest days of the coronavirus, much of the American economy was ordered closed, leaving businesses reeling and many workers without jobs. But AGC of America made the case that construction could find a way to keep going while protecting workers and the public. And we will make sure the construction industry leads the recovery. Are you a member of AGC? Associations were made for times like these, and we are proud to support our members and advocate on behalf of the construction industry in Alaska. Emotional Intelligence – A Deep Dive into soft skills for a hard industry

Emotional Intelligence (EQ) is widely misunderstood. EQ was never about being nice to people, it is about understanding the impact of emotions (visible and hidden) on decision making, leadership and building effective relationships. This session will briefly introduce EQ but then deeply focus on two important areas; optimism and stress tolerance. In times of uncertainty these two unique elements of EQ are proving to be the difference between success and failure. This is all made even more challenging as we lead and manage remotely. Things that come easily face to face are harder in the virtual world. This makes understanding EQ even more important. This session will help you assess where you are in these areas and give you usable tools and ideas to improve.

VUCA Leadership

The U.S. Army War College introduced the concept of VUCA to describe the more volatile, uncertain, complex and ambiguous world resulting from the end of the Cold War. This is exactly the environment leaders find themselves in today. Leadership 101 is a great start but the VUCA challenges of today require leaders at all levels to be better. How do you motivate in a virtual VUCA world? How do you engage people when you are one browser tab away from distraction? People are anxious and concerned and great leadership must address this. This hard-hitting interactive session will answer those questions and help participants see their path forward with proven techniques to overcome the challenges they face.
